Time to apply for the CELT Miller Faculty Fellowship Program

The Miller Faculty Fellowship, in existence at Iowa State University since 1996, is a competitive grant program that supports faculty members to "enhance their scholarly work in the university's undergraduate academic programs and develop innovative approaches to enhance student learning."

CELT is now accepting proposals for 2022-2023 Miller Faculty Fellowships with the deadline of Monday, December 13, 2021. Funding for 2022-2023 will include three categories of grants:

- Requests up to $5000
- Requests up to $15,000
- Requests up to $25,000.

For 25 years, the Miller Fellowship Program has funded over $3 million dollars worth of projects to over 250 faculty within each university's colleges. Previous Miller Faculty Fellows note that the funding improved their undergraduate teaching and furthered their professional development with proof of concept seed funding for external grants and opportunities to present and publish their work.

One former Miller Faculty Fellowship recipient shared: "Since the Miller Funding, I have written three articles and am currently composing a book. I have also written and obtained a grant from an external agency. This work all stemmed from the initial Miller grant funding."

#CyThx Teaching Spotlight: Dr. Eulanda Sanders, Department of Apparel, Events, and Hospitality Management

Teaching Advice

Education is a partnership between student and teacher, in which the aim is to enhance life within our environments. My goal as an educator is to challenge students to strive beyond their expectations, thus empowering them with confidence in their abilities to thrive in our multi-faceted society. Education provides a foundation for students to develop a sense of humanity, sensitivity, and accountability towards individuals and the environment in which they live....

#CyThx Message

Dr. Sanders has supported me in every way when it comes to my research interests. As a first-generation student, at times this degree can seem out of reach but Dr. Sanders has helped me deal with my imposter syndrome, showing me it’s attainable, while holding me accountable during the process. I’m completely online but I do not feel like I’m missing out with the way she stays connected with me.
